- Dine-in restaurants, brewpubs, breweries, bars, and pubs that provide sit-down meals should follow the dine-in restaurant guidance and should continue to encourage takeout and delivery service whenever possible.
- Brewpubs, breweries, bars, and pubs that do not provide sit-down meals, but wish to operate under this Order must obtain an Emergency Food Permit.

Wineries and tasting rooms may remain open at this time. Additional guidance and the full health officer order can be found here.

“We have made the decision to close bars to be in compliance with State guidance, especially since our case count continues to rise day by day. This action, particularly in anticipation of the holiday weekend, is a proactive measure to curb the spread of COVID-19 locally,” said Dr. Henning Ansorg. “We have to keep each other safe during this time. Changing our habits by making physical distancing and wearing a face covering part of our daily routines will save lives.”

This health officer order is closing bars due to the findings that physical movement of people within bars, the duration of time spent in the establishment, and the degree of social mixing within individuals and groups are all greater in these settings.

GOVERNOR RECOMMENDS CLOSING SANTA BARBARA AND VENTURA COUNTY BARS

By edhat staff
June 28, 2020

Governor Gavin Newsom ordered the closure of bars in seven counties and recommended the closure in eight others including Santa Barbara and Ventura.

The order and recommendations were put in place to a rise in COVID-19 cases throughout the state after the majority of business sectors were allowed to reopen.

On Sunday afternoon, Newsom posted an alert on twitter stating, "Due to the rising spread of #COVID19, CA is ordering bars to close in Fresno, Imperial, Kern, Kings, Los Angeles, San Joaquin, and Tulare, while recommending they close in Contra Costa, Riverside, Sacramento, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, Santa Clara, Stanislaus, & Ventura."

"COVID-19 is still circulating in California, and in some parts of the state, growing stronger," wrote Newsom in a statement. "That's why it is critical we take this step to limit the spread of the virus in the counties that are seeing the biggest increases."

California Public Health Department (CDPH) Director Dr. Sonia Angell stated they are actively monitoring COVID-19 across the state and are working closely with counties where there are increased rates and concerning patterns of transmission. "Closing bars in these counties is one of a number of targeted actions counties are implementing across our state to slow the virus' spread and reduce risk," she said in a written statement.

The CDPH guidance recommended that counties on the County Monitoring List close bars for three or more consecutive days, but less than 14 days, through local health officer order. Santa Barbara County, who has been on the monitoring list for 13 days, might be mandated to issue a health officer order to close bars given the rising case count locally.

The Santa Barbara County Public Health Department (PHD) is strongly considering options to address these concerns and is continuing to track local metrics while hoping to have further updates regarding the State's recommendation in the coming days., according to a press release issued Sunday evening.

The actions defined in the guidance include the closure of brewpubs, breweries, bars, and pubs, unless they are offering sit-down, dine-in meals. Wineries and tasting rooms are not included in this recommendation.

According to CDPH, bars are social environments where groups of people mix. In these environments, alcohol consumption reduces inhibition and impairs judgment, leading to reduced compliance with recommended core personal protective measures, such as the mandatory use of face coverings and the practice of social and physical distancing. Bars are generally louder environments requiring raised voices leading to the greater projection of droplets. These factors present a higher likelihood of transmission of COVID-19 within groups, between groups, and among the workforce.

"I implore all community members to adhere to strict physical distancing at all times and avoid gatherings. Until there is a vaccine, the use of face coverings in conjunction with physical distancing is the most effective way to stop the spread of this virus," said Dr. Henning Ansorg, Health Officer for Santa Barbara County. "The State's recommendation comes at a critical time. There is still an opportunity to make a difference in the course of this pandemic, but we must all recommit to this effort."

On Friday, Santa Barbara County Public Health reported 81 new COVID-19 positive cases bringing the grand total to 2,712 with 54 recovering and 20 of those in the intensive care unit. However, health officials stated some percentages of cases are decreasing and hospitals are equipped to handle a potential increase of patients.

This past Friday also marked the local health officer's approval to reopen previously closed personal service businesses including nail salons and tattoo parlors.

CDPH released a new website forecasting a series of metrics for all counties. The CalCat tool forecasts that Santa Barbara County will have a total of 309 COVID-19 related deaths and 154 daily hospitalizations by the end of July. The county is currently recording 28 deaths and 53 daily hospitalizations.

I don't know... people are quick to point to protests as the timing for increase in exposure. BUT, Memeorial Day weekend - and the wholesale opening of Santa Barbara to paying tourists - happened around the same time. It almost feels like some people are trying to say we shouldn't stand up and be counted, but we should bow down to money. Just my opinion. And, agreed - SB City and County should probably close the beaches this weekend. Because people won't exercise their own common sense.

SBCOUNTYLOCAL JUN 30, 2020 12:16 AM

Bars WON'T close. They now sell food and are exempt. The order to close bars is a act. Newsom wants to look like he has done something. He has. We are now sitting ducks in a city that won't enforce executive orders or proclamations. Let the virus rage...

FERNALDPOINT93108 JUN 30, 2020 12:03 AM

What about Hollister Brewing Co or The Brewhouse, that also serve full meals. Do they have to close?

SBLETSGETALONG JUN 29, 2020 10:49 PM

I found this interesting in the UCSB COVID testing article on EdHat this eve, “ Direct close contact is defined by SBCPHD as being within 6 feet of the individual while not wearing a mask for a time period of 10 minutes or longer.” So passing by someone in a grocery store or hardware store is not a concern to the SBCPHD? What about the checker or bagger at the store? How about the waiter/waitresses, etc.,..? Data, numbers; Are our hospitals in South County or North County overwhelmed? Are the patients being treating from the area or were they moved here? Hospitalizations have not kept pace with the number of new cases. Good news, right? Has the death toll gotten “out of hand”? I understand hospitalization and deaths will lag new cases, but to date the death rate of those infected in SB has been less than 1% including the prison, Lompoc and Santa Maria where most of the cases have been. To date less than 1% of SB County has tested positive. I’d say SB has done a great job so far. I’m also saying, toe the line, be responsible. And remember the experts are still figuring all of this out, like the above statement regarding 10 minutes of exposure. I hadn’t heard that one before. And the WHO says 1 meter, 3.2 feet, for social distancing. Masks were just mandated a couple weeks ago after COVID being around for five months here and 7-8 months overseas. And this is a virus and spreads similar to other viruses, yet they're still guessing. Please remember, there are other battles going on, like paying rent and putting food on the table. Depression, social anxieties, stress, fear, etc.. So stay home if you are concerned, don’t patronize businesses that do not sanitize between every customer, wear a medical grade mask, practice good hygiene, sterilize before you take your mask off and sterilize everything before it enters your car and home. And remember we will get through this as we have for centuries.

Somebody did a long cut and paste. Golf clap.

A-1593527555 JUN 29, 2020 09:37 PM

Why July 1st and not immediately? County health officials announced that they were expanding the businesses that could re-open to include massage parlors, nail salons, and a list of other personal service enterprises that includes among other things genital piercing. Why not keep them all closed until it is safe? None of these businesses are essential, except to the owners, for whom I feel very bad. COVID-19 is not their fault, but it does spread indiscriminately inside buildings where social distancing is not possible, like bars and restaurants and other similar places. The last three times that I have had to go out for groceries or a medical procedure, I have been counting mask wearers and non-mask waters, now that the Gov mandated wearing them in public. I counted 40 people wearing masks out of 141 who were not in vehicles or business establishments - just walking on the sidewalk or running. That's 28□/%. I don't think people are taking this seriously enough. And, as much as I am jonesing for a good genital piercing, it can wait. ';/?

A-1593527555 JUN 29, 2020 07:26 PM

What doesn't make any sense to me is the hysteria... "WE'RE CLOSING THE BARS!... in two days. " The same thing happened with other businesses shutting down, and the mandate on mask wearing. "It's out of control. We must do something!.... in two days." I'm not questioning spread, but if it's truly dire - why wait two days?

WCFW JUN 29, 2020 09:00 PM

It is rather interesting. If we are truly "making data-driven decisions," why not let us see what the contact tracing data says. My guess is we have spent hundreds of thousands of tax payer dollars on contact tracing to date. What does the data tell us? Of the almost 2K community spread cases, what does the contact tracing data say? My guess is fairly specific information can be given without violating HIPAA. If the data shows it's the bars, great, shut them down. Otherwise, I think we're barking up the wrong tree. The data we do see shows almost half the cases are in North County. Why aren't we locking it down?

420722 JUN 29, 2020 07:01 PM

At least we know we can still protest because there is no risk in that. Wink wink.

From what I have been noticing, theses young people could care less about the disease or getting it. They are out playing at bars and such hanging on each other. Not wearing masks, and not practicing necessary distancing guidelines. Sadly, it doesn't looks like we will be out of the woods for a very very long time.

A-1593527555 JUN 30, 2020 02:34 AM

You mean you could not care less. If you could care less, that means you still care at least a little bit.

BIGMAN JUN 29, 2020 04:17 PM

Why are those in charge of contact tracing telling the tracers not to ask if someone attended a protest? That is not right. I personally feel they either are concerned about liability from allowing the protests or are shielding organizers from liability. We should have recourse if we are infected or if a family member dies from contracting it from someone acting negligently/recklessly - at least have thea bility to go to court and get a ruling. Not right. Contact tracers must ask if someone was at a protest too.

A-1593527555 JUN 29, 2020 09:40 PM

We'll see what happens in the courts because not sure if you know but even employers now face potential liability if someone gets sick at work - depending on the standard of care they applied. Same will likely happen with business owners and anyone who organizes protests that put the greater public at large in danger. These are uncharted waters and I suspect many cases will come down out of this.

BENE JUN 29, 2020 07:18 PM

In order to stop the spread, large events and gatherings of ANY KIND were at first forbidden. This was considered one of the main ways to stop the spread. Why did this thinking change? For political reasons? My friends and relatives who are performing artists are going bankrupt. All their concerts have been canceled. THEY are still not allowed to have a large gathering, unlike some other favored groups. I don't care if it's a Trumpian mask protest or a BLM protest--this is just one heck of a terrible time for any protest. Any big gathering is so not a good idea. There is no control over people's behavior at such big events . If event organizers of ANY kind think they are off the hook because they mention people should wear masks, they are not. It is widely known that unless you take an N95 away from a health care worker, so to speak, the kind of masks available to people offer only a small percent of protection even if everyone wears one--and wears it correctly. Available masks absolutely do not provide full protection -- especially if people are in big groups yelling and bunched up close to each other.

A-1593527555 JUN 29, 2020 06:45 PM

Big troll didn't cite a source.

GENERALTREE JUN 29, 2020 06:44 PM

Do contact tracers ask if they were at an anti mask protest?

SACJON JUN 29, 2020 05:20 PM

BIGMAN - do you have a law degree? I've studied negligence plenty and it is not simple "recklessness." The first question is - did BLM have a duty of care towards protesters? Not all of them, for sure. Many of these protests were not "organized" by BLM, they were local, regional and in the cases of the first protests, were entirely spontaneous. They were organized by local community leaders, etc in the name of BLM as a theme, not an event organizer. BLM likely had no duty to these people from a legal standpoint (except to those directly organized by BLM), as they were not affiliated in that sense. Therefore there was no "breach" of any duty, which would then put us into a causation analysis which I'm not going into now. Furthermore, for those protests legitimately "organized" by BLM, in order for there to be some breach of the duty of care towards the protesters, BLM would have had to encourage violation of, or in the very least ignore, the mask and social distance orders. Every protest page/flyer, etc I saw, it was clear that people were expected to act "safely" and wear mask. To wrap it up here, it will definitely NOT be as simple as you think to find any negligence and liability in BLM. On the other hand, there have been MANY recent events where the organizers and the President of the US have encouraged open defiance of the mask and distance orders...... that's another story though...

A-1593527555 JUN 29, 2020 05:09 PM

SACJON absolutely. I don't care if it's a negligent business, if it's my employer being negligent, a rally or a protest. I'm sorry but, look at what is happening. PPL are coming out of this virus with permanent damage. As long as ppl are doing things right - and protests AND rallies are NOT - then that's fine but at some point those being reckless and negligent must be held accountable. Perhaps fear of that will get people to sit up and pay attention and act responsibly. BLM doesn't have to tell people to not wear masks to be negligent. You should research what negligence is. Recklessness. It's obvious not everyone would wear masks plus there was little distancing. Totally foreseeable.

If my kids can't play baseball (considered a "medium risk" sport by the CDC), then why should adults be able to sit in crowded bars getting drunk and yelling and doing what drunk people in crowded spaces do? This is stupid. I get that people need to keep businesses running to put food on their plates, but bars are NOT essential, nor are they in any way a safe place to be during a pandemic. Close them down, drink at home.

If you listen to the mainstream media, you might be convinced that opening early killed the masses in Texas, Arizona and Florida. But a big part of the “spike” in cases is because of testing. We’re completing five times as many tests every day as we did in mid-April when the pandemic actually hit its peak. Yet deaths are decreasing daily, which is what is important. It’s also worth noting that this recent uptick in cases started exactly 14 days after the beginning of mass protests. Despite that, the mainstream media will try to tell you that the protests didn’t cause the spread because many in the mobs were wearing masks. These stories are being extremely selective. That’s because the actual epicenter of the pandemic in our country is currently in California, and California never really reopened and when it partially opened, it did so late. Here are the facts for you to ponder: Yesterday, California had 5240 cases and 31 deaths; Florida had 8530 cases and 27 deaths; Arizona had 3857 cases and 9 deaths; and Texas had 4330 cases nd 10 deaths. There is no consistency in any of this. And, as a reminder, we can thank the CCP for all of this panic, suffering, misery, and unnecessary death.

RHS JUN 29, 2020 02:33 PM

Worldometer is not a very reliable site as far as data quality. You'd be better off with a real medical site like Johns Hopkins University. Citations below from the Wikipedia article on them:

==

"Worldometer has faced criticism over transparency of ownership, lack of citations to data sources, and unreliability of its COVID-19 statistics and rankings. The website reported that 18,000 people recovered from coronavirus in Spain on April 24, compared to the Spanish government figure of 3,105 recoveries for that day."

==

"Edouard Mathieu, the data manager of Our World in Data, stated that "Their main focus seems to be having the latest number [of COVID-19 cases] wherever it comes from, whether it's reliable or not, whether it's well-sourced or not.""

==

"Virginia Pitzer, a Yale University epidemiologist, said that the site is "legitimate", but flawed, inconsistent, and containing errors."

==

"On the English Wikipedia, editors reached a consensus not to cite Worldometer for coronavirus statistics."

PITMIX JUN 29, 2020 12:56 PM

Bigone, update your analysis using hospitalizations and ICU rates and your conclusions won't be erroneous due to variations in testing results. Hospitalizations going up, ICU rates, going up, about 1/2 of the people in ICUs die. But if you like your problematic statistics, stick with them.

DW2000 JUN 29, 2020 11:31 AM

Also if one were to actually use the John Hopkins website and go to the "Critical Trends" tab, one would see that California is not even in the top 10 in new cases per 100K residents. Those Top 10 pretty much all go to conservative states: https://coronavirus.jhu.edu/data/new-cases-50-states

I also said John Hopkins reported the same number. Do you trust them? World of Meters publishes their data compiling it from several verified sources so they can't all be wrong. Here are some other info to ponder from USA Today, which I don't really like but others seem to love them: "On Sunday, New York state reported just five coronavirus deaths, which is the lowest seen since March 15, Gov. Andrew Cuomo said. Just 616 of New York's almost 62,000 tests Saturday resulted in positive diagnoses, a rate of 0.99%, Cuomo said." And from John Hopkins, once again: "The spike in deaths on 6/25 is due to New Jersey adding over 1,800 probable deaths to the state's totals." I'll say it one more time, deaths increasing would be a major concern but cases increasing was to be expected and has been predicted from multiple sources almost from the beginning of all this.

Worldometers isn't a verified and trusted source. Also, deaths lag behind positive cases by about 14 days. Models from reputable sources show the death rate and hospitalization rate growing significantly in the next month. More testing will inevitably capture more positive tests, but to deny the fact that we're having an ongoing pandemic with continued spread is contrary to all evidence that we have and everything that we know about the behavior of the virus. Do you have college experience in statistics? Doesn't seem like it- no offense.

RHS, where are you getting that data? Please let us know. My data comes from World of Meteres and is also confirmed on the John Hopkins site. The total deaths in the U.S. on June 26 was 663. On June 28, it was 285. Politics has nothing to do with this data, only how the media interprets and presents it to a gullible public. Here are the actual facts that you can see for yourself with daily cases, deaths, by entire country or by state here: https://www.worldometers.info/coronavirus/country/us/ So, yes, deaths are decreasing and for you to spread your "report" is unfounded by the data.
